

D) Act for a better recognition of SSE by institutions

By capitalizing actions and policies of its members, RTES aims also to carry their voices to national, European and international institutions. In this sense, the network works for a better recognition of SSE by institutions but also advocates the development of policies and regulatory frameworks in favour of SSE at local, national and European levels.

Members of RTES can consult the network on national and European policies (laws, decrees...), and RTES established an internal committee specific to Europe linked with European authorities.

For example, RTES :

- participates to the French High Council of SSE and to the work on European and international issues,
- makes some concrete proposals on specific topics and laws which can impact SSE,
- participated to the European Commission's expert group on social entrepreneurship (called the GECES) from 2015 to 2018,
- and contributed to the Global Social Economy Forum (GSEF).

3 Organization

RTES works in collaboration with different partners who promote SSE at different levels. RTES collaborates with several SSE networks at the local, national and European levels (for instance with ESS-France, the CNCRESS, REVES, RIPESS...) and with local authorities' networks like Régions de France or Energy Cities, in order to develop the place of the SSE in public policies. The collaborations aim mainly at co-organizing events and supporting the writing and publication of thematic studies.

RTES sits on the board of the French High Council of SSE and is also asked by governmental bodies to contribute to working groups on SSE.

Finally, and more logistically, RTES is managed by a board of directors composed of 25 elected members: regional, departmental or local councillors. Its head office is located in Lille and includes four employees. For the year 2018, the projected budget of the network amounts to 280 000€. And these resources are mainly based on the members' subscriptions (that contribute to 80% of the budget) and state subsidies.

Social and Solidarity Economy (SSE) and its public policies in France

As in many European countries, SSE appeared in France in different forms from the middle of the 19th century onwards and co-operatives, mutual companies and associations have developed throughout the 20th century. But social economy only really started to be taken into account in the national policy in the 80's with the creation of an Interministerial Delegation for the Social Economy in 1981 and then, through the establishment of a State Secretariat for Solidarity Economy in 2000.

During the last decade in France, all levels of local authorities have developed SSE policies. A dedicated national Ministry was created in 2012 and a specific law was adopted in 2014. This law was adopted after a two-year consultation and debate with stakeholders and was a turning point for the development of SSE in France. The French law clearly defines SSE organizations: associations, co-operatives, mutual companies and foundations and, under particular conditions, commercial companies (social utility purpose, democratic governance, profits mainly reinvested to achieve the activity). And a SSE axis must be adopted in Regional Economic Development Plans (SRDEII).

1 RTES

Created in 2002, RTES is a French network that gathers today 130 local authorities (regions, municipalities...) that share a common conviction: SSE is an economy which is able to bring some relevant answers to economic, social and environmental needs on the territories. With RTES, the local communities, which signed a charter benefit from an exchange and coordination platform on national level.

RTES focuses on the relationship between local authorities and SSE and promotes the different means that local authorities can use to support SSE initiatives (promotion, public subsidies, responsible and sustainable public procurement...). RTES' main objectives are to strengthen the position of SSE in public policies and optimize the role of public policies in the development of the social economy.

RTES supports :

- SSE as an economy which meets social, economic and environmental needs.
- The development of SSE policies co-created with all the stakeholders and actions based on a partnership between communities and grassroots initiatives.
- A broad vision (multiplicity of actors and sectors) and a cross-cutting approach of the SSE.

Through :

- The promotion of local authorities' initiatives for the development of SSE.
- Good practice exchange between members of the network
- Examining conditions to improve existing policies.

2 Actions

A) Providing visibility

One of the aims of RTES is to give visibility to policies and actions that French local authorities set up to develop SSE. Consequently, the network develops many types of communication medium to inform, highlight the initiatives and raise awareness among other local authorities and institutions.

For example, RTES :

- enhances and contributes to the publication of press articles on SSE topics.
- updates its website with many articles, files and studies on specific SSE topics.
- highlights its members' news in its monthly newsletter ("SSE call for action", "Social innovation policies", "Opening an SSE incubator", "Urban policy and SSE"...).

B) Promoting good practice exchange

RTES organizes national and local meetings on different subjects in order to enable representatives and officers to discuss their experience, to share their assessment and to think about the integration of social economy into public policies. For example, RTES organizes a yearly meeting with local authorities in order to discuss the main issues about social economy.

For example in 2018, RTES organized and participated to :

- the 7th National Meeting of local authorities on SSE held by the French Ministry for environmental and solidarity transition,
- the « Europe and SSE » meeting
- the « Local authorities and complementary local currencies » meeting,
- the « Metropolis and social economy » meeting in partnership with l'Avise (a French agency that promotes SSE).

C) Advising and informing

RTES organizes training sessions for elected officials and civil servants on specific topics (such as sustainable food, public procurement, circular economy, sustainable mobility...), and organizes also free web-conferences on current issues for its members.

Moreover, in order to keep its members informed, the network publishes a monthly newsletter, a quarterly letter and thematic works in relation with the academic world and think tanks specialized on SSE issues. Each week, a selection of articles is sent to members.

For example, RTES organizes and publishes :

- 6 times a year : online conferences on different themes (« Accessible and sustainable food », « Solidarity garages », « Reserved contracts », « Civic energy »...),
- once a year a training session on the « New economic models », co-organized with the National Centre for the Training of Local Civil Servants,
- 12 monthly newsletters, almost 30 news report reserved to members and 3 printed letters,
- almost 10 notes a year focusing on a precise grassroots initiative and its links with local authorities,
- twice a year a Point de RepèreESS (a short focus on different topics, for example « Access to land »),
- twice a year a more developed publication the RepèreESS, for example : « Europe and social economy: issues and means of action for local authorities ».
